In 2009 the McDonough School of Business will open the doors of its new building in the center of Georgetown’s campus. With a stunning glass pavilion, wireless classrooms, and a unique colloquium space, the building was designed to facilitate maximum interaction between students and faculty. Undergraduates, MBA students, faculty, alumni, and recruiters will all be welcome in this elegant new space.

Future GeorGetown Un IversIty’s McDonough School of Business is the premier business school strategically located in the nation’s capital. The most recent class of MSB students comes from 38 different states and 31 different countries, adding to a student body that is diverse in background as well as strong in academic achievement. As part of the Georgetown University family of programs, the MSB offers students a world class business education within a liberal arts-based Jesuit university.

The McDonough School of Business has dedicated and experienced faculty who are committed to working closely with their students, both in and out of the classroom. MSB professors regularly meet with students, advising them on career options, working with them on research projects, and serving as advisors for student organizations.

Georgetown is a student-centered university. In practice this means that I try to be a resource to all of my students both intellectually and personally. In turn, I recommend that they get to know at least one faculty member for every semester of their studies to broaden their resource base.”

— Professor Ilka Ronkainen, MS, MBA, PhD, Business Administration

MSB STUDENTS HAVE A GREAT COMBINATION of critical thinking, intellectual curiosity, and motivation, which creates a very stimulating environment in the classroom. Oftentimes, my interaction with students inspires my own research endeavors.”

— Professor Delbora Thompson, PhD, Marketing

IN ANY MSB CLASS, professors will be challenged by students who traded securities last summer, studied at Oxford or Hong Kong, or who are Excel or technology experts. This requires professors to remain on the frontiers of business knowledge and scholarly initiatives.”

— Professor David Walker, PhD, Economics

“AS A FIRST-YEAR BUSINESS STUDENT I attended an on-campus event sponsored by the U.S. Department of the Treasury featuring Warren Buffett, Mike Bloomberg, Chuck Schwab, and Alan Greenspan. That same month Arnold Schwarzenegger lectured on environmental issues. As a student, you know you’re part of something truly exceptional when you can complain that Bill Clinton’s motorcade is blocking your way to class. It’s a feeling no other school can duplicate.”

— Rob Chedid, MSB, ’10

“THE MSB ENCOURAGES its students to study business abroad so that we can understand how inherently global business is today. My time studying marketing in Hong Kong was one of the best experiences I have had while at Georgetown. Not only did I have fun, but it brought to life the lessons my professors had been teaching me about our global economy.”

— Christine Fraser, MSB, ’08

“THE MSB CONTINUOUSLY PROVIDES and supports extracurricular endeavors that allow for our business studies to be complemented with practical business applications. The administration and faculty have shown an unwavering support for my entrepreneurial endeavors with the student-run company, Mission Three, demonstrating their true value in sustaining a well-balanced learning environment.”

— Arthur Woods, MSB, ’10

“BEING A VOLUNTEER at a local charter school offers me everything I look for as an emerging leader: the opportunity to learn, receive hands-on experience, and make a difference. Dedicating my time and energy to this worthy cause has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my undergraduate career.”

— Tiffany Yu, MSB, ’10
